

Vasiliki is an associate director in the international law firm Berwin Leighton Paisner's Competition, EU and Trade law team. Her practice focuses on international trade and customs law as well as general European law and competition law, including State aid.

She represents clients before the European institutions and is an experienced litigator, representing governments and corporate entities before the European Commission, the Court of Justice and the General Court of the European Union, as well as in dispute settlement procedures before WTO panels and the Appellate Body.

Vasiliki regularly advises clients in trade defence investigations, trade barriers, investment, customs and export control matters. She has been involved in a number of important state aid cases, in particular fiscal state aids. Vasiliki also advises on EU regulatory law, specialising in agro-food, health, environment and energy issues. She has been recommended by the “Legal 500” directory for her work relating to the EU’s Regulation “REACH” in both 2009 and 2010 editions.

Vasiliki has authored a number of publications on European and WTO law and policy and regularly speaks at conferences or seminars. She has also provided training to civil servants of non-EU countries working on WTO matters and is a visiting lecturer at the University of Barcelona on its Master of Laws in International Economic Law and Policy.

Vasiliki has read law in Greece, the United Kingdom and Belgium and is a qualified Greek lawyer as well as a Member of the Brussels Bar (EU list).
